

REPORT TO THE GOVERNOR
AND THE NJ STATE LEGISLATURE
A DECADE OF SUCCESS
2003 - 2013

“We are extremely grateful to the New Jersey State Legislature for supporting the Clean Communities Program since inception in 1986...”

TO GOVERNOR CHRIS CHRISTIE AND MEMBERS OF THE NEW JERSEY STATE LEGISLATURE,

The Trustees of the New Jersey Clean Communities Council are extremely grateful to the New Jersey State Legislature for supporting the Clean Communities Program since inception in 1986 with the passage of the Clean Communities Act. Funding provides for municipal and county litter abatement programs, litter pick up in state parks, and the statewide program of public information and education that includes a media campaign aimed at sustaining a reduction in litter.

We are delighted this year to celebrate a decade of success. Since 2003, more than 400,000 volunteers have picked up and recycled about 700,000 tons of trash from 230,000 miles and 426,000 acres of public property. We have reached 3.5 million people with Clean Communities messages.

In 2011, we assumed responsibility for New Jersey’s Adopt-a-Beach program. In 2012, we partnered with the NJ Department of Transportation to create a volunteer Adopt-A-Highway program. We are deeply grateful to the team of county coordinators who developed and annually update the Best Practices in Clean Communities CD.

Enclosed is the Report to the Governor and Legislature. The report highlights the activities of the Clean Communities Council from 2003-2013, including specific information on contracts SHW11-006 and SHW12-004 as required by law. The report was published following the collection of data from the 2011 statistical reports and completion of the 2012 DEP contract.

Respectfully submitted,

OVERVIEW

New Jersey Clean Communities is a grassroots, community-driven program created to reduce litter in the Garden State. It has been one of the most popular programs administered by the State of New Jersey since its inception in 1986, when the Clean Communities Act was first signed into law.

The Clean Communities Act provides funding for a comprehensive litter abatement program by placing a user-fee on businesses that may produce litter-generating products. The user-fee results in a fund of about $18 million each year with about $16 million being disbursed directly to municipalities and counties for grassroots litter-abatement programs.

The program is managed by the departments of Environmental Protection and Treasury, in conjunction with the New Jersey Clean Communities Council.

The New Jersey Clean Communities Council is a 501c3 nonprofit corporation whose mission is to use education to change the attitudes that cause littering. The Council was first organized in 1988 as an advisory committee to the state Clean Communities Program, then located in the Department of Environmental Protection. During the 1990s, the state of New Jersey faced a severe budget shortfall that virtually eliminated the positions and personnel that provided oversight and public education for the program. The advisory committee, determined to continue these services, sought, and in September 1995, received nonprofit status as the New Jersey Clean Communities Council. When the Act was passed once again in 2002, the Clean Communities Council received a grant of $300,000 to continue the work of educating residents. The passage of the Recycling Enhancement Act in January of 2008 increased funding to provide for a media campaign that would help to sustain a reduction in litter. The Council receives $375,000 every year.

Over the past eight years, the Council...

- Opened an office at 479 West State Street in Trenton and hired personnel to manage the state program. The Council relocated in 2010 to 222 West State Street in Trenton.
- Re-established the network of municipal and county coordinators that supports the state program; created an education program designed especially for coordinators, including regional workshops offered in the fall of every year.

- Established a clearinghouse of information based on data collected from municipal and county statistical reports, augmented in 2006 with the creation of a Best Practices Manual in CD format. The CD has been revised and updated in each of the six subsequent years.
- Re-established the student awards program popular in the 1990s, and renamed it Kids-Teens for Clean Communities; created the Environmental Student Exchange program to promote environmental education and the exchange of ideas.
- Created an Environmental Ambassadors program to honor students for leadership, community service and commitment to the environment.
- Re-established the awards program that had been an integral part of Clean Communities since the first Make New Jersey Glitter awards luncheon in 1989. Spring conferences and awards programs have been hosted by the Clean Communities Council for eight years.

- Released a statewide visual litter survey to determine the most effective ways to reduce litter, the first survey conducted since 1989.
- Established a state Urban Cleanup Team for towns with dense populations where litter tends to accumulate.
- Created in 2009 a Slam Dunk the Junk media campaign to enhance educational activities and sustain a reduction of litter.
- Assumed responsibility for the state Adopt a Beach program in the spring of 2011.
- Assumed responsibility for Adopt-a-Highway program in 2012.

An Executive Director, Director of Constituent Relations, Manager of Operations, Adopt-a-Highway Coordinator and Executive Assistant are employed by the Clean Communities Council.

LITTER SURVEY

The Clean Communities Council, in its first year of operation, released a statewide, visual litter survey that would become the basis for the program over the next five years.

The litter survey was conducted by Gershman, Brickner & Bratton (GBB) in conjunction with the Institute of Applied Research. GBB concluded:

- New Jersey's urban roadways appear more littered than roadways in rural areas, and that urban roadways show twice the accumulation of litter than in other states surveyed. New Jersey's rural roadways appear cleaner than those in other states.
- 75% of people deliberately littering along urban roadways are males between the ages of six and 24; people littering deliberately along freeways and rural roadways are between the ages of 11 and 24.
- The largest category of visible litter at 21.3% is fast-food packaging.
- Paid advertising is the most effective and least costly way to reduce litter

In the fall of 2003, the Clean Communities Council hosted the first Gateway Cleanup in Newark. The cleanup was based on a model created by the City of Trenton in the 1980s. By 2004, the Clean Communities Council officially launched the state Urban Cleanup Team to address excessive accumulations of litter in urban areas and foster grassroots community participation in the program. In 2004, Atlantic City, Elizabeth, Irvington, and Paterson joined Newark and Trenton as members of the team. To date, 20 towns participate.

It was not until the passage of the Recycling Enhancement Act in 2008 that the Clean Communities Council was funded to carry out a media campaign. Slam Dunk the Junk was launched at the annual Clean Communities conference on May 19, 2009 in Newark.

KIDS-TEENS FOR CLEAN COMMUNITIES

2005 marked the year of the first Kids-Teens for Clean Communities Student Awards Program, held on May 23 at the Oyster Point Hotel in Red Bank. The Clean Communities Council partnered with local organizations to offer workshops for students on oyster bedding, diving for trash, and water pollution. The student awards program was held on the first day of the Clean Communities Conference, establishing a format for conferences in years to come.

This first awards program attracted 200 students and teachers who accepted awards and participated in workshops. Attendance at the student awards program has increased dramatically over the past six years; 1,800 students, teachers and volunteers with participating every year.

Kids-Teens for Clean Communities reinstated the New Jersey Litteracy Association, which was part of the state Clean Communities Program in the early 1990s. The program promotes environmental education and addresses the Council's mission of changing the attitudes that cause littering.

BEST PRACTICES

The Clean Communities Council fulfilled its goal of providing a clearinghouse of information for its constituents in 2006 when a team of county coordinators - JoAnn Gemenden (Union), Liz Sweedy (Morris), Carole Tolmachewich (Middlesex), Diana Vigilante (Somerset), and Melinda Williams (Salem) - created a Best Practices in Clean Communities Manual.

The manual, in CD format, in each of eight years has been revised and updated. It is a compilation of information such as the proper use of grant funds; lists of educational materials, vendors and performers; samples of program materials; and examples of excellent municipal and county programs.

For example, the Cumberland County Improvement Authority partners with the Cumberland County Sportsmen's Federation and the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection's Division of Fish and Game to organize a "trash hunt" on public lands in Cumberland County. The county provides supplies and waives tipping fees. Over 713 tons of trash, including 12,964 tires, have been collected from 75,000 acres of waterways and woodlands since the program began in 1992.

The Salem County Utilities Authority has organized Keep it Covered, a program designed to reduce litter on county roads by providing tarps to residents who are transporting bulky waste to the county "convenience center." The center is open for the convenience of residents who would like to bring their own waste to the center at a minimal fee. The program is especially effective in Salem County where rural roadways are affected by vehicle litter and debris.

The Ocean County Corrections Department's Divers Environmental Education Program (D.E.E.P) educates third- and fourth-grade students in Ocean County about the effects of litter and pollution on sea life, the ocean and the environment. Field trips are conducted to Gull Island. Over the last decade, thousands of students have participated in the program.

The county coordinators who compiled information for the CD have managed Clean Communities programs for 20 years and have received Clean Communities Awards for standards of excellence.

NJFC SCHOLARSHIP AWARD

In the spring of 2007, the New Jersey Food Council (NJFC) launched the first NJFC Scholarship Program, providing a new incentive for standards of excellence in environmental education related to litter abatement and the proper handling of waste.

The scholarship, in the amount of $1,000, has been awarded for eight consecutive years as part of the annual Clean Communities Conference. All nominations submitted for Kids-Teens Awards are considered for the scholarship. Special consideration is given to projects or programs that are ongoing, innovative and that may be a model for the state. Food Council President Linda Doherty presents the scholarship check at the annual Clean Communities Awards Banquet.

The scholarship is a testament to the Food Council's commitment to New Jersey Clean Communities. The organization has played a lead role in legislative issues related to Clean Communities since the 1980s. NJFC member organizations pay 50 percent of the user-fee that funds the state program.

2006 Business Partnership Award

BUSINESS PARTNERSHIP PROGRAM

The Clean Communities Business Partnership Award Program reached new standards of excellence in 2008, with increased support from corporations charged with promoting an environmental, greening ethic. Waste Management of New Jersey led the way.

For decades, the corporate waste giant donated supplies and dumpsters to municipalities throughout the state for cleanups. Over the past several years, Waste Management has participated in the City of Elizabeth's New Energy Cleanup, hosted jointly by the Clean Communities Council and the City of Elizabeth during Earth Week of every year. In 2008, Waste Management employees cleared 10 tons of debris from a roadway at South First Street in Elizabeth. The company adopted the roadway, which has been a site of illegal dumping for years. In 2009, Waste Management employees cleaned an entryway at Empire Street and Route #22 in Newark.

Waste Management provided unprecedented financial support for the Clean Communities Conference in Princeton, making it possible for nearly 1,000 students, teachers and volunteers to attend the Kids-Teens for Clean Communities Student Awards Program on May 21, 2008, in Jadwin Gymnasium on the Princeton University Campus. Waste Management was honored with the Business Partnership Award on May 22, 2008 at the Nassau Inn in Princeton.

Covanta Energy accepted a Stewardship of Public Lands Award on that same occasion. For six years, Covanta employees have participated in Newark's Gateway Cleanup, clearing more than 20 tons of garbage from Doremus Avenue. Covanta adopted a traffic island at Lockwood and Raymond Boulevard, as part of the city's Clean Entryway Program. Covanta was the recipient of the 2009 Business Partnership Award, and joined the Clean Communities Council board of trustees the same year. Business Partnership Awards have been presented to Whole Foods (2010), Six Flags Great Adventure (2011), NJ Natural Gas (2012), Wawa (2013) and Hopewell Valley Community Bank (2014).

SLAM DUNK THE JUNK

The Clean Communities Council reached new standards of excellence in 2009 with several new educational initiatives. As part of the annual spring conference, the Council launched a Slam Dunk the Junk campaign to remind people to use litter bins and recycling containers, and keep litter off the ground. The phrase was first coined in New Jersey by seven-year-old East Orange resident, Quamir Payton, in the spring of 2007 when he reminded members of town council to enforce anti-litter laws and help keep the city clean. The phrase became the motto of the East Orange Clean and Green Center and was later adopted by the Clean Communities Council for a statewide campaign. Slam Dunk the Junk graphics appear on trash/recycling cans, in light boxes and on banners and posters in the Atlantic City Convention Center, Meadowlands Complex, Great Adventure, and in county and municipal facilities throughout the state. Two public service announcements have been aired on network and cable television stations as well as on closed circuit TVs. Quamir Payton was honored as the first New Jersey Clean Communities

Environmental Ambassador in 2009. Subsequently, the Council launched an environmental ambassadors program aimed at promoting the accomplishments of youngsters who show creativity and organizational skills in supporting values of a clean and healthy environment.

Miranda Pawline, a resident of Delanco in Burlington County, served as the second New Jersey Clean Communities Environmental Ambassador. Pawline organized a town-wide recycling campaign to keep plastic bags off the ground along the Delaware River where she lives. During her stint as the environmental ambassador, she received a USEPA President's Youth Award.

The Slam Dunk the Junk media campaign is funded by money appropriated to the Clean Communities Council by the passage of the Recycling Enhancement Act in 2008. SGW Communications, located in Montville, was awarded the contract for a media campaign in 2009. SGW retained the contract for five consecutive years. The contract was awarded to the Jaffe Communications in 2014.

CLEAN COMMUNITIES ENVIRONMENTAL STUDENT EXCHANGE

The first Clean Communities Environmental Student Exchange occurred in the city of Brigantine in 2009 but reached new heights in 2010 when PSE&G came on board as the project's sole corporate sponsor. The purpose of the student exchange is to bring students from different regions of the state together to collaborate on an environmental project, to exchange information about environmental issues and develop innovative solutions to problems. Projects in the past six years have been beach cleanups; topics for discussion have been water conservation and the effects of natural disasters on the environment. Student exchanges have been hosted by the Clean Communities Council in Brigantine (2009), Liberty State Park (2010), Wildwood Conference Center (2011), Palisades Interstate Park (2012), Asbury Park (2013) and Ocean City (2014). The 2011 Clean Communities Student Exchange is notable because the Clean Communities Council announced that the NJ Department of Environmental Protection transferred responsibilities for the state Adopt-a-Beach program to the NJ Clean Communities Council.

ADOPT-A-BEACH

In the spring of 2011, the NJ Department of Environmental Protection announced a partnership with the Clean Communities Council that transferred the administration of New Jersey's Adopt-A-Beach program to the Clean Communities Council. The program was created by the passage of the Adopt-a-Beach Act in 1992 to encourage volunteers to clean and maintain New Jersey's beaches. By 2011, its mission expanded to include the volunteer cleanup of beaches, bays, rivers, lakes and streams and all waterways. In keeping with the mandate of the Adopt-a-Beach Act, the Clean Communities Council hosts two cleanups each year. The International Coastal Cleanup, organized by the Ocean Conservancy in Washington, D.C., takes place in September of every year. The Clean Communities Council also hosts the Clean Water Challenge from March 1- April 30. Volunteers are honored at the Clean Communities awards dinner which takes place in May of every year. The Clean Communities Council also supports cleanups organized by the Department of Environmental Protection including cleanups in the Barnegat Bay, Delaware and Raritan rivers, and state parks where illegal dumping is rampant. The Clean Communities Council is honored to carry on the tradition of adopting beaches in New Jersey.

PROGRAM SUMMARY 2003-2013

ADOPT-A-HIGHWAY

In the spring of 2012, the NJ Department of Transportation announced a partnership with the Clean Communities Council to create an Adopt-a-Highway program that would encourage volunteers to clean and maintain state highways.

Our mission is to reduce litter on state highways in an ongoing effort to enhance the appearance of New Jersey's landscape, protect the health and welfare of New Jersey residents, and promote a booming economy.

The Clean Communities Council administers the daily operations of the program, provides safety training for volunteers and supplies for cleanups. The Department of Transportation approves highway locations, installs recognition signs, and removes and disposes of trash after cleanups. Volunteers conduct cleanups four times each year for two years, and abide by the safety rules and regulations required by the NJ Department of Transportation and the NJ Clean Communities Council. The Clean Communities Council recognizes volunteers who have adopted highways at its awards dinner every year.

The NJ Clean Communities Council is honored to carry on the tradition of New Jersey's Adopt-A-Highway program.
