Williamstown Teacher Receives “Excellence in Education” Award from NJ Clean Communities Council

WILLIAMSTOWN – June xx, 2015 – Miranda Basilone, a teacher at Williamstown Middle School in Gloucester County, has received the “Excellence in Education” Award from the New Jersey Clean Communities Council (NJCCC) for her participation in the Environmental Student Exchange Program, held in March at Waterloo Village in Stanhope.

Basilone assisted in the planning and execution of the seventh-annual event in which hundreds of students from schools across New Jersey participated in the clean-up of a riverbank and participated in environmental projects and discussions.

“Miranda was instrumental in the success of the Environmental Student Exchange Program, inspiring all students to contribute in the cleanup, as well as the discussions,” said Sandy Huber, executive director of the New Jersey Clean Communities Council. “We are so grateful for her commitment to education, and recognize her for her outstanding efforts, both for her students and the New Jersey Clean Communities Council.”

New Jersey Clean Communities Council is a comprehensive, statewide litter-abatement program that has served New Jersey residents and visitors for more than 25 years. Learn more about the New Jersey Clean Communities Council at njclean.org.
